

The Articulatory Basis of Locality in Phonology

Contents

Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Illustrations	xv
Abbreviations	xvii
Chapter 1: Introduction
1. Central Thesis	3
2. Theoretical Background	10
2.1 Gestures in Articulatory Phonology	11
2.2 Specific Assumptions	16
3. Organization of the Dissertation	21
Notes	24
Chapter 2: Articulatory Locality
1. Introduction	25
2. Articulation of a VCV Sequence	26
3. Articulation of a CVC Sequence	34
4. Converging Sources of Evidence for Articulatory Locality	38
4.1 Vowel Harmony	39
4.2 Consonant Harmony	46
4.3 Spreading in Nonconcatenative Languages	48
5. Previous Proposals on Locality	52
5.1 Tier-Adjacency in Various Feature Geometries	52
5.2 Grounded Phonology and Dependency Phonology	58
5.3 Locality as Root Adjacency	60
6. Autosegmental Spreading and Articulatory Locality	65
7. Summary and Conclusion	69

Notes	70
-------------	----

Chapter 3: On the Proper Characterization of ‘Nonconcatenative’
Languages

1. Introduction	73
2. Chapter Organization	74
3. Correspondence in Optimality Theory	76
4. Temiar Verbal Morphology: A Unified Account of Copying	78
4.1 Basic Prosodic and Morphological Properties	79
4.2 Segmental Copying Derived by Correspondence	87
5. Temiar in Previous Analyses	100
6. On the Need to Eliminate LDC-spreading	104
6.1 The Apparent Need for Reduplication and Spreading ..	104
6.2 The Exceptional Status of LDC-Spreading	107
7. Typological Consequences	110
7.1 Further Analyses	110
7.2 A-templatic Affixation	115
8. Summary and Conclusion	117
9. Excursus on Minor Syllables	119
Notes	126

Chapter 4: Articulatory Investigation of Coronal Consonants

1. Introduction	131
2. Articulatory Subdivisions of the Tongue and Palate	134
3. Semi-Independence Between the Tip-Blade and the Dorsum	139
3. Mid-Sagittal Postures of the Tip-Blade	141
5. Proposal for a New Distinctive Feature	144
5.1 English	145
5.2 Chinese	151
5.3 Tohono O’odham	154
5.4 Other Languages	158
5.5 The Feature Tongue-Tip Constriction Area	160
5.6 Speaker-to-Speaker Variation	161
5.7 Language-to-Language Variation	163
5.8 The Feature Distributed	165

6. Summary and Conclusion	170
Notes	172

Chapter 5: Cross-linguistic Investigation of Consonant Harmony

1. Introduction	175
2. Chumash	178
3. Tahltan	184
4. Northern Athabaskan	190
4.1 Chilcotin	191
4.2 Tahltan	194
4.3 Sekani	196
4.4 Slave and its Dialects	197
4.5 The Fricative-Approximant Alternation	198
5. Southern Athabaskan	200
5.1 Navajo	201
5.2 Chiricahua Apache	203
5.3 Kiowa-Apache	204
6. Kinyarwanda and Other Cases Involving Fricatives	205
7. Sanskrit	207
8. Australian Languages	214
9. Comparative Analysis	217
10. Previous Analyses of Consonant Harmony	224
11. Apparent Cases of Consonant Harmony	228
11.1 Sound Symbolism	228
11.2 Child Language	231
11.3 Consonant Disharmony	232
12. Summary and Conclusion	236
Notes	238

Chapter 6: Conclusion	241
-----------------------------	-----

Bibliography	245
--------------------	-----

Index	263
-------------	-----